MONTHLY COMMENT

After continued market weakness at the start of the month, global equities rallied late in November to record a positive 1.2% performance for the month. Healthcare, Real Estate and Utilities stocks were the best performers during a month which saw global bond yields falling on growth fears. Oil stocks were the worst performers during November as the oil price fell back from $75 at the start of the month to $59 by month end. The drop was the largest monthly fall in over a decade, fuelled by burgeoning US inventories. Global equities have risen by 4.8% in euro terms since the start of the year. The Options Strategy contributed negatively during the month as the call option limited the upside from stocks which performed well as the markets rose.

STRATEGIC OVERVIEW

The investment manager adheres to a strict investment process and invests in large global stocks which historically pay higher than average dividend yields.

The investment manager sells call options on some of the stocks within the portfolio (the UCITS fund) using a simple options strategy that provides the Fund with additional income.

The investment manager will use this additional income from selling the call options to buy some 'insurance' to help protect it against significant equity market falls.

STOCK SELECTION

The stock selection process involves a number of stages:

A. The global universe of stocks is quantitatively screened to identify attractive candidates for possible selection by the investment manager. These candidates will display the following characteristics:

- Dividend yields which are typically above the global sector average
- Positive dividend growth
- Financial strength, as reflected in solid balance sheets and cash flow statements
- Attractive valuations

B. The investment manager then undertakes rigorous fundamental analysis of the candidates that meet the screening criteria and, where possible, meets the company management.

C. From the list of these candidates, the investment manager selects stocks which will be structured.
